Have you ever gone to a gig not knowing what to expect, then returned home wondering what you witnessed, but was impressed nonetheless. That was of Mobadass and Kyprios' May 29 gig at the Blarney Stone. Not being a rap fan, I wasn't sure what I was about to see, but I had to check out rap performed with a crack live band behind it.

Kyprios kept the crowd hopping and dancing while Wide Mouth Mason bassist Earl Pereira proved he is a dazzling bassist, as well as has a wicked voice, which leans heavily on the R and B side. His voice was complemented perfectly by Kyprios, who had a crowd bouncing in front of the stage, keeping up their energy. He also proved to be quite the singer as well

They played their hit "Nobody Knows" as well as some Sweatshop Union hits as well as original Mobadass/Kyprios material which they said on stage they hadn't played before an audience before.
