

Cropdusters rock the country with fiddle lines on guitar

Written by Richard Amery

Wednesday, 01 September 2010 15:32 - Last Updated Wednesday, 01 September 2010 15:38

I caught the end of a pretty cool group called the Cropdusters at Coyote Joes, Aug. 28.

They were playing country music, including a couple Johnny Cash numbers but what impressed me was how the guitar player was playing fiddle lines on his Stratocaster, which had me looking for the fiddle player.

They ended their first set with Johnny Cash's "I've Been Everywhere," but changed all of the place names mentioned in the song to Canadian cities.

— By Richard Amery, L.A. Beat Editor{jcomments on}